

I am completely opposed to making any technology for receiving over the air TV transmission illegal. There are already conditional access features for satellite and cable TV. There needs to be a place where new technology ideas can be independently pursued without onerous laws available for incumbents to use against innovation. We already have copyright laws in place to protect legitimate rights. Don't allow existing organizations to hold veto power over all possible new developments. Don't forget that the whole home VCR market would not have been possible if the incumbents were allowed to automatically prevail.
